PARIS, Mar. 31.—(INS)—Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini are swiftly dividing between them the tastiest morsels of territory and of spheres of influence not actually within the frontiers of France and England.

And today Il Duce has once more terrified the covering democracies by his warning that he would make war hard, fast and first on anybody who tries to interfere with his victory in Spain.

That is the sense of Mussolini's extraordinary speech in which he declared he can and will throw 9,000,000 soldiers, one of the best air fleets in the world and a navy which, though small, is good against any enemy of Italy daring to obstruct her manifest destiny.

France is the number one addressee for these remarks, which come at a moment when the French Government, confused by internal strife, is ill prepared to reply.

England is the second party intended to listen well and carefully to Mus-solini's own appraisal of his military strength, while he and the British continue their negotiations for what Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain hopes will result in a general Italo-British agreement.

Behind Mussolini stands Hitler, and now Il Duce is expecting to receive the first payment on his surrender of Austria.

With Hitler's support, Il Duce can be confident neither France nor England will dare to carry out any plans which small fighting minorities in both countries have been discussing to check the final conquest of Spain by Generalissimo Francisco Franco and his Italo-German allies.

Among these plans, one which probably provoked Mussolini's war-like declaration, is that of certain French military and naval circles supported by a group said to include foreign minister Joseph Paul Boncour, defense minister Edouard Daladier and army general staff chief general Gamelin.

This group is keenly aware that continued presence of Italo-German troops in Spain after Franco's apparently inevitable victory may be a life and death menace to France.

They therefore are said to have planned to wait until Franco captures Barcelona, then serve him with an ultimatum either to send home the Italian and German troops or take the consequences, first of which would be seizure by a French fleet landing party of the Island of Minorca, and maybe a couple of coastal towns such as Carthagena and Alicante.

Encouraging this die-hard group of French politicians and generals was a report brought to Paris from an equivalent group from Britain that Chamberlain could be forced to support the French if during these threatened operations France were threatened by the Italian fleet and air force.

Now, however, the feeling is that Il Duce's muscular stand and direct threat of war may extinguish any such French and English plans. For now, as always, the democracies wish above everything to avoid war, and when faced by Mussolini with an unmistakable intention to fight they probably will back down.

Meanwhile, nevertheless, the French navy is carrying out maneuvers near the Balearics and the strain between the dictatorships and democracies is becoming every day more intense.

And talk of war this summer comi-nates every gathering place of citizens of this unhappy continent from sidewalk cafes to the chancelleries of major capitals.

What frightens everybody from Prime Ministers to restaurant waiters is the rapidity and severity of the blows now being delivered first by Hitler and then by Mussolini, each time with reciprocal support.

Saramay Bassett Surprised By Friends On Wednesday

Miss Saramay Bassett was pleasantly surprised Wednesday evening by friends at her home on Corson street. Games and dancing were followed by a buffet supper. Miss Bassett was presented with many gifts.

Those present: Anna Nealis, Anna and Blanche Hoffman, Rita Dolan, Elizabeth Mulligan, Bristol; Rose Armstrong, Helen McKinley, Steven Murray, George Hayes, Robert Heilings, James Churchill, Philadelphia; Joseph McGee, Burlington, N. J.; William Thompson, Ralph Fitch and Leonard Newbold, Trenton, N. J.

JAMES LASHES PINCHOT; CALLS HIM G.O.P. WRECKER

Candidate Denounces Former Governor As Barring Unity
Of The Party

HITS HIGH TAXES

PITTSBURGH, Mar. 31.—Superior Court Judge Arthur H. James, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, invaded Western Pennsylvania last night and leveled his guns on former Governor Gifford Pinchot.

Judge James spoke as follows:
Fellow Republicans of Allegheny County and Pennsylvania:

Twelve years ago I came to this great city a candidate for Lieutenant Governor. I was a stranger among you, and yet, under the leadership of Frank P. Patterson I received a tremendous vote from your citizens. Now that I am a candidate for Governor I am proud to say that my record in office has been of such character that the same Frank Patterson, who was elected and re-elected a judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County has publicly endorsed my candidacy.

This is an example of the old familiar proverb: "Make new friends, but keep the old ones," which certainly expresses my political philosophy.

I am proud to look back through my several political campaigns and remember that I finished each of them with more friends than when I started, and when I started each new one, I still had the friends who were with me on the campaigns which had preceded it.

No one could ever say that Arthur James is the kind of man who had to look up a new circle of friends every time he runs for office.

This evening I shall discuss with you at length, among other things, "The Harvest of Expediency."

For the past four years the people of not only this great Commonwealth, but the entire nation as well, have lived under the lash of expediency; a lash which not only has driven us into economic chaos, but is surely robbing us of our most precious possession—Liberty.

It grieves me very much this evening to see that the pattern thus cut apparently has been adopted by one of your prominent Republicans here in Pittsburgh.

The world waited breathless for several months while Senator Frank Harris was trying to decide where to drop.

Now he has dropped, and the campaign can begin.

In his recent declaration Senator Harris, while very kindly giving me a certificate of good character, in the same breath completely departs from the time-honored Republican principle of supporting men for public office upon the basis of their merit and their qualification to meet the issues of the day.

Substantiation of the foregoing appears in Senator Harris' statement that he is supporting Gifford Pinchot solely because Pinchot, he believes, can win. That, in plain English, is the very essence of expediency, and I am sure you people recognize it as such!

In the first place, measured by any yardstick you choose to employ, Senator Harris, or anyone else in Pennsylvania, who has reached a similar foolish conclusion, that "Pinchot can win" is deluding himself. The conclusion is based on theory—flimsy theory at that—and not on either past performance or present signs. The wish is simply father to the thought!

My opponent has run six times for major public offices in this state and lost four, while, on the other hand, I've been a candidate four times and won four. Further, start conducting your own poll right now by asking the next person you meet where he or she stands in this race, and see if you don't get an answer something like this: "I'm for Arthur James because I like his record of past performance in places of public trust, what he stands for, and what he declared at Plymouth the other night he intends to do when Governor of Pennsylvania."

Fellow citizens, I for one feel entirely confident that you men and women of Western Pennsylvania are far too well informed these days to have any "smoothie" politician put that expediency blind bride on you and then lead you up a back alley.

Oh, no! I'm sure you, like myself, are not yet ready to desert the bread and board of Abraham Lincoln and others of our beloved forebearers for

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY

Whether Doylestown borough's tax rate will have to be increased this year depends entirely on whether $6000 in delinquent water rents are collected in full within the next week.

This became a known fact at an adjourned meeting of Council when members of that body gave unanimous consent and approval for a representative of the Borough to start out this morning at nine o'clock and turn out the supplies in the homes and business places having delinquent accounts. The water will be connected again at a charge of $1 as soon as the bill is paid.

Council also definitely tabled the proposition to allow wooden shingles in Doylestown borough outside the fire zone, but did pass upon first reading a number of other changes to the building code.

Commenting briefly on the question, "What are the agricultural possibilities of this community?" at a fairly well attended meeting of the Chalfont Grange, Norman C. Kratz declared that the price governs the output of every community. Continuing Mr. Kratz said if the same crops are raised each year, the price, which may fluctuate from year to year, will adjust itself and the farmer will get more for his labor than if he switches from one crop to another in an attempt to find a higher price.

Doylestown's post office, a government statement reveals, has made a notable record in the sale of Savings Bonds, as shown by the tabulations for the year from September 1, 1936, through August 31, 1937.

Among the first class post offices in the State numbering 85, Doylestown stands sixty-first, for per capita sales totaling $18,112.50.

Bristol, standing 84th, on the per capita basis, sold $18,318.75.

Washington, Pa., was number one in the State with sales totaling $149,062.50.

Chicago led the nation with sales totaling $22,636,062.50, with Philadelphia trailing along with $7,601,325.

(The following article, last in a series of two, is the result of a survey of the United Aircraft Corporation, largest single manufacturer of airplane equipment in the nation, to learn how this country shrouds its aerial developments in secrecy.—INS.)

EAST HARTFORD, Conn., Mar. 31.—(INS)—Secrecy shrouds the manufacture of army and navy aircraft here at the United Aircraft Corporation, largest single airplane company in the nation, builders of propellers, motors and ships.

Working three eight-hour shifts a day behind a seven-foot barbed-wire fence, with guards stationed at all entrances, the casual visitor to the nearby square-mile grounds remains just a casual visitor. He is unable to penetrate past the guards unless he has a pass, given only after he has established his American citizenship and been endorsed by an official.

Talking to a company spokesman, this correspondent asked how workers were prevented from entering the three different plants, provided they wore an identifying badge with their picture.

"Each division of this company has a colorful badge," said the official. "Those in the motor section are of one color, those in the propeller division another, and a third color is provided for the ship construction unit. Should an employee from the motor section wander through to the ship division, he would be stopped for the guard would notice his badge was a different color."

After expressing a desire to visit the manufacturing units and establishing documentary proof of citizenship, this correspondent was given a pass.

With the company spokesman's keys, we passed from the administration building through a garage, through two doors (locked) and into a quarter mile long and three-eighths-mile wide motor manufacturing unit.

Along the center aisle, on the left hand side, are endless steel cages housing raw materials, finished products, tools and blue prints. All busi-

House Damaged By Fire At Morrisville

MORRISVILLE, Mar. 31.—Fire blamed on a painter's blow torch yesterday caused damage to the home of Mrs. Michael Elukowitz, 129 Central avenue, Morrisville, while smoke and water caused damage in the adjoining home of Mr. and Mrs. John Kurtz. A rear bedroom on the second floor of the Elukowitz home was gutted.

Mrs. Elukowitz was shopping when the fire broke out and returned home to find the bedroom in flames. She told firemen that a painter had been removing paint from the outside of the house. Morrisville firemen responded to the alarm.

The Rotary Club of Morrisville will observe "Police Night" this evening. The club members have invited the local, county and state police to be guests at the weekly dinner session at Leghorn Farms.

Justice of the Peace Neal Nolan will be in charge and Sergeant E. J. Engle, of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, will be guest speaker. His subject will be, "New Laws and Their Enforcement."

Aside from Sergeant Engle, other guests will include: Corporal R. D. Evans, also of the Pennsylvania Motor Police; Joseph Lebeget, of Morrisville police department; James Welsh, president of the Bucks County Police and Constables' Association and Chief of Police of Doylestown; County Detective Anthony Russo; Lieutenant F. J. Sparling, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Police; Sheriff William L. Stackhouse, and Edmund Mason, Morrisville's first chief of police.

Newlyweds Are Feted At Home of Groom's Parents

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Eastlack, Frankford, formerly residents of Bristol, entertained friends at their home on Tuesday evening in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Eastlack, who were recently married.

The evening was enjoyed in a social way. Miss Frances Eastlack entertained with guitar selections, and Miss Anna Eastlack, vocal and piano solos. A supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Eastlack were presented with many gifts.

Those attending from Bristol: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Griffith, Bath street; Mrs. Samuel Hearn, Garden street; William McDonnell, Linden street; Mrs. Charles Perkins and son Charles, Wood street, and Mrs. Sara McCoy, Harrison street.

Arrest Man and Fine Him For Distributing Circulars

Police arrested a Trenton man and he was fined $5 and costs today for distributing circulars of a Trenton store. The circulars were being distributed on Bath street, when the arrest was made.

The man gave the name of Peter DiPietro, 61 Lincoln street, Trenton, N. J. He was taken before Justice of Peace James Guy in the Municipal Building and fined $5 and costs.

Police stated that the firm for which DiPietro was distributing circulars had been warned repeatedly that the law in Bristol was to be enforced and that if the circulars were distributed that arrests would be made.

Tornadoes Leave Death, Ruin

Roaring out of Oklahoma, tornadoes today left a trail of death and ruin through five middle-west states.

Twenty-nine persons were known to have been killed and hundreds injured, while tremendous property damage was done in Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas and Kansas, as well as in the state in which the blast originated.

Illinois bore the brunt of the storms with 11 known dead and the town of South Pekin virtually destroyed. Six of the town's 1500 inhabitants were killed. Only two of its 300 buildings were left standing.

A suddenly blackened sky presaged the wind's onslaught at South Pekin, with an interlude of rain; then the tornado rolled on toward Venice, where one was killed; then on to Alton, with an estimated property loss of $200,000 in the state.

Eight persons were killed and 100 injured in the vicinity of Columbus, Kansas. Fifty buildings were shattered in and around the town, including a grade school, where more than 100 pupils were rescued without a death.

Find Boy's Body

New York, Mar. 31.—The bloated body of a boy found in the waters of Upper New York Bay, near a Brooklyn pier, today was checked for identification marks on the slim possibility that it might be that of 12-year-old Peter Levine. The boy apparently had been murdered.

Young Levine was kidnapped from his New Rochelle home on February 24th, and preliminary examination of the body indicated that it might have been in the waters for a month.

JUDGE BOYER CRITICIZES NEW EDUCATION LAW

Says It Is "A Compulsory Loafing Law For Youths"

KIWANIS CLUB SPEAKER

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 31.—Addressing the weekly dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club, Tuesday night, at the Doylestown Inn, Judge Calvin S. Boyer, of the Bucks county courts, a member of the local club, declared that the new compulsory education law in Pennsylvania is nothing more than "a compulsory loafing law for youths."

The guest speaker took as his subject, "The common factor in juvenile delinquency." The well known jurist minced no words when he referred to the Keystone State's new law which will eventually compel boys and girls to go to school until they are 18 years old.

"This law will prove to be an absolute curse and will make young people loaf," Judge Boyer declared. "You are going to compel boys who cannot study to loaf another year or so. It is a very bad law and I can state only one reason why it was passed, and that is the labor unions wanted it. Labor unions do not want to employ young people and allow them to work and learn a trade."

"This factor of leisure time is one of the very most important in curbing juvenile delinquency. What Kiwanis and other service clubs need to do is to look after the leisure time problem of youths today. I am glad to say that we are very much interested in the Boy Scout movement, it is a real

TRUCK FARMERS SOWING EARLY SPRING CROPS

Spinach, Beets and Carrots Are Now Being Planted In Lower Bucks County

APPLE BUDS ADVANCED

Truckers in Lower Bucks County have been kept busy with planting of the early crops, including spinach, beets and carrots.

The recent warm weather gave the farmers impetus to work on their fields. Where the ground was in condition a large amount of plowing for oats was done and farmers in all parts of the county have sowed their oats. At present a number of the farmers are engaged in sowing the clover on top of the winter grains.

According to County Agent William F. Greenawalt, Doylestown, apple trees in this part of the county are advanced as far now as they were on April 12 last year, and this, it has been said, is due to the unusually warm weather recently.

Mr. Greenawalt stated that should the temperature drop to as low as 26 degrees during the next few weeks, the buds on the apple and peach trees will be damaged to a great extent.

During the past week most of the growers in this part of the county have been busy with the application of the dormant spray, but now they are on the border line for the dormant spray and they must wait for the time for the application of what is known as the delayed dormant spray.

According to the number of aphid eggs on the apple trees, the infestation of aphids during the coming season will be quite heavy. During the extremely warm weather the past week thousands of aphid eggs were hatched on the trees. Mr. Greenawalt said that a few days of cold weather will result in the destruction of the young aphids, but it will not damage the eggs that have not been hatched.

Speaking of crops in general, Mr. Greenawalt said a few days ago that the open winter has caused an exceptionally severe heave in the alfalfa fields. In some places the roots have come very near to the surface. This, it has been said, was caused by the frequent freezing and thawing.

GIRL DIES OF BURNS; CLOTHES IGNITED PLAYING IN FIELD

Eva Ann Sidorsky, 222 Cleveland St., Suffered Third Degree Burns

AIDED BY PHYSICIAN

Taken To Hospital Immediately and Given Treatment; Burns Were Too Severe

A little girl six years old died early last evening as the result of third degree burns which she received Monday while playing in a field with a group of other children, just a short distance from her home.

The child, Eva Ann Sidorsky, daughter of John and the late Eva Sidorsky, was having a fine time Monday along with a group of children of her own age, when her clothing caught fire from burning grass and weeds. The youngster ran from the lot onto Farragut avenue. Dr. George T. Fox was at a nearby gas station and seeing the child took her to the Harrison hospital where treatment was given.

The Sidorsky family, five years ago, suffered another tragedy when a son, Walter, nine years of age, was so badly injured that he died. The lad was playing on the old line of the P. R. R., when his foot caught in the track and a freight train ran over his leg. The leg was amputated but the shock caused his death.

Two years later the mother of the child died.

One brother, Raymond, and a sister, Mary, along with the father and a step-mother, survive Eva, who will be buried this afternoon from the father's residence, 232 Cleveland street, at four o'clock. Burial will be in St. Mark's Cemetery under the direction of the W. I. Murphy Estate.

Bristol Student Named Year-Book Representative

Walter A. Fagan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Fagan, 1322 Pond street, senior at Rider College, Trenton, N. J., has recently been elected as representative of Rider to the National College "Who's Who." "Who's Who" is a year-book compiled annually with outstanding student representatives from various American Colleges and Universities.

Mr. Fagan, who is president of the Dramatic Guild at Rider, has taken several of the leads in past Guild productions. He has also coached and directed some of the shorter plays given by the Guild.

Mr. Fagan is a member of the senior Business Administration Department at Rider. He was elected last Fall to the Skull and Sabres, an honorary society for men, and belongs to the Phi Sigma Nu Fraternity.

In 1936 Mr. Fagan was graduated from Bristol high school, where he was president of the Hi-Y Club, chairman of the student council, and co-captain of the track and basketball teams. He had the masculine lead in two of the high school shows, and in 1934 won the Bucks county declamation contest.

Sister is Honored When Group is Entertained

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Busso, 1146 Beaver street, entertained on Sunday evening in honor of Mrs. Busso's sister, Miss Beulah Harrison, Frankford, who was their week-end guest.

The guests included: Miss Sara DeFrancesco, 1144 Beaver street; the Misses Emma Tynmore, Margaret O'Brien, Robert Gugger, William Brown, Albert Frank, Charles Carlin, Richmond.

Dancing and the serving of refreshments rounded out a pleasant evening.

THREE GIVEN FAREWELL

Norman Nelson, John Hughes and Joseph Vertichio, who have been employed in Bristol and residing on Wilson avenue, accepted positions with an aircraft corporation on Long Island. On Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. James Richardson, Wilson avenue, gave a farewell party for these young men. Dancing and singing were enjoyed, and a lunch served to: Mr. and Mrs. George Gudenberg and son Carl, Mr. and Mrs. James Richardson and son James, Mrs. Ida Cooper, Miss Dorothy Downing, Miss Ruth Richardson.

WHAT'S IN A NAME

We have been taught that the Six Nations and other Indian tribes named many of our states and cities and rivers and mountains, but much of our knowledge of these matters is incorrect, according to the experts of the Smithsonian Institution whose studied conclusion, just made public, is that our information has been garbled by ignorance of the Indian language. They go further and say that misinterpretation has been perpetuated by officials of the states when names were adopted on entering the Union.

Consider Kentucky, for instance, and Alabama. The former, all tradition to the contrary, does not mean "dark and bloody ground," nor the latter "here we rest." These misconceptions came from inability of the white men to understand the Indians, mispronunciation and poor interpretations by one tribe of Indians of the language of another, according to the new findings of the speech scholars.

Alabama, the etymologists declare, may be literally translated as thick cutters or medicine gatherers, and Kentucky probably came from the Iroquois root word kenta, meaning level ground, or it may be from ikana or land, but never dark and bloody ground.

Wisconsin has resisted all efforts of etymologists or those wise in Indian lore. It is impossible to tell how it was evolved and by what distortion of language. Ohio is easier; it is an Iroquois term, meaning beautiful river. Another which is correctly interpreted is Minnesota, land of the sky-blue water. Oklahoma in Choctaw is red people. Nebraska is flat water, but Wyoming is on the plain, not field of blood, as it often is mis-called; it originally was applied to the area around Wilkes-Barre, scene of the Wyoming massacre, and later was given to the Rocky Mountain state by settlers from Pennsylvania.

Massachusetts came from the Algonquin word massa, meaning big, and wadchu, meaning hill. Connecticut is Algonquin for on the long tidal river, and Mississippi is the big water. But Missouri is not Sioux for dwellers on the big muddy, but Algonquin for the man of the big canoe.

Tennessee, like Wisconsin, remains a puzzle.

FRIENDLY CANADA

Canada must keep out of war, declared Agness McPhail, sole woman member of the Canadian House of Commons, in a speech in Parliament on the proposed defense program.

In more direct and concise terms than such sentiment usually finds official expression, the speaker declared distrust of safety sought through agreements with European nations. Even Great Britain, she said, is too far away to be able to assist Canada. She finished with this significant sentence: "More and more I am becoming North American in my viewpoint."

Unquestionably such sentiment will find approval of a large body of public opinion on both sides of the boundary line. Trusting on the North American viewpoint, the belief that the nations of this continent should not be embroiled in future European wars, appeals to common sense generally in the western world.

Such an authoritative expression of Canadian thought will give assurance to many both in the United States and in Canada.

The Great Game of Politics

This rather unlovely trait, some of his close friends have privately asked newspaper men to refrain from attributing to them any weight as counselors. "If you want to put me in the doghouse," one man is reported to have said, "just keep on printing that I have a stronger influence with the President than anyone else."

IN THE early days of this monopoly-message business, the press would report first that the Jackson-Corcoran-Chen element was dictating the Roosevelt campaign and then that he was being swayed by the more and relatively conservative Mr. H. H. H. (between the two factions of palace politicians, the President seemed unable to make up his mind, appearing, at different times, sympathetic toward each, he has tried to occupy middle ground, which has kept him stationary, so to say stagnant. At the start, it was certainly his intention to follow up the inflammatory Jackson-likes speech at attacking business, which he had approved in advance, with a message saying the balance of the stamp on it.

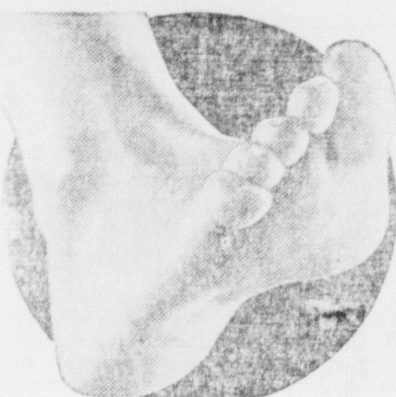

STILL it still his desire, as evidenced by his Gatesville thrash, he clings to his rivals that the only thing that stand between the country and recovery are the selfish few, whom he never names, but continually refers to. The President's unfavorable attitude toward the Jackson-Jackson group followed the Jackson group's determination to follow up—and for a while undoubtedly did incline Mr. Roosevelt toward the moderate H. H. H. views. At one time it was more or less authoritatively stated that the monopoly message, providing for self-regulation as urged by Mr. H. H. H., was complete and would "shortly be sent to Congress." Rallying their forces, the radical group, aided by Mr. Roosevelt's personal desire to continue his feud with Big Business, not only succeeded in holding him off but in swinging him back toward their side.

IT WASN'T so hard to do because the President's personal inclinations are in their direction. It seems incredible that in the present low state of national affairs, with unemployment increasing daily and people generally worried, the President should not grasp the vital importance of good relations between the Administration and business—make every effort to establish such. Instead, he seems unable to stop nursing his grudges or to refrain from unfriendly expressions either at his press conferences or in his public utterances.

IF, AS is suggested by his New Deal allies, he returns from Warm Springs with a "hot" monopoly message, written largely by young Mr. Jackson, whose gubernatorial aspirations recently went up in smoke, and insisting upon establishing as his ally for the depression the sinister activities of "The Sixty Families" and a selfish few—if he come back with that, all chance of co-operation will vanish and business initiative continue in a state of paralysis. There will then be nothing to do save look to Congress to nullify the President's proposals at this session and count upon the good sense of the voters in the fall.

"Love I Dare Not" by ALLENE CORLISS

SYNOPSIS

Alec Graham, 35, is a successful playwright, and Gina Warren, at 31, has matched his success in her own field, portrait painting. Ten years ago, they had been in love, but the demands of their careers had become so pressing that, finally, they had drifted from the idea of marriage into an almost casual friendship. Dining with Barry Bedard, art critic and old friend, Gina confesses to him her regret that she and Alec allowed ambition to become more important than love. Believing that Alec shares her feeling she resolves to discuss their future with him later that same evening. While Alec is waiting for Gina at her apartment, her 19-year-old cousin arrives from Maine to study dramatics. Though disappointed at finding Gina out, Caroline is thrilled to meet the not-so-Alec. They talk of the theatre and Alec—interested in Caroline's unusual personality and intelligence—promises to help her. A few days later he places her with a dramatic coach, Rose Martell. One night, not realizing that he is falling in love with Caroline, Alec asks if she is in love with anyone. He is glad, for her career's sake, when she assures him she is not.

CHAPTER VIII

"You're not what, darling?" asked Gina, coming in at this point in the conversation, looking very lovely and festive in a frail black dinner dress.

"Alec," said Caroline, with her quick, wide grin, "has been trying to pry into my love life."

"Has he?" said Gina, and felt that swift, painful stab at her heart that Caroline so innocently and so frequently gave her. Then she said, wondering why, in spite of everything, she liked this child so very much, "And what did he manage to discover about it?"

"That I haven't one," grinned Caroline. "Excuse me, you two, while I get my lipstick and my coat," and she went off blithely and left Gina alone with Alec.

Alec said, "Sit down, darling, and let your elderly dinner date wait. I haven't seen you for days, and it is much more important that we have a few minutes together occasionally than that you be on time for a tiresome engagement."

"But, Alec," protested Gina, urging soft black gloves swiftly over slim, ringless fingers, "it's terribly important for me to persuade him I should go to Pittsburgh next week and do his portrait."

"Good Lord!" Alec looked genuinely distressed. "You wouldn't go tearing off to Pittsburgh, darling? You're only this minute back from Ohio. Damn it, I wish you were going with us tonight."

She looked at him, her heart beating swiftly, and thought, "He really means it. . . . he would like me to go with them. I am probably unduly alarmed about his interest in Caroline. It probably isn't what I think it is, at all." She thought then, "Perhaps some time very soon now, I will talk to him about us, after all."

But a week later it looked as if she would leave for Pittsburgh without even seeing Alec again, much less talking to him.

Then he called her up and arranged to take her to dinner and to the train.

They went to a small quiet restaurant and he ordered dinner carefully and then sat looking at her as if among all the people in the world, there was no one he had rather be looking at, at the moment, than her.

Gina meeting his eyes, thought, "Anyone seeing us would think we were lovers. . . . and she found it a little ironical and painful to think how wrong they would be."

She said, "Be nice to Caroline while I'm away, won't you? It's going to be a bit lonely for her alone in the apartment."

"Don't worry, she's working much too hard to be lonely. When she gets through with a day with Rose, I imagine she's ready to crawl into bed and sleep the clock around. By the way, I saw Bernstein today. He was pretty difficult at first, but in the end he promised to look out for something for her after Christmas. Some small walk-on part with a few lines, perhaps."

In spite of herself, Gina felt her breath come faster. She said, forcing herself to speak calmly, "That means that she'll be leaving town, I suppose?" And saying it, she realized how exquisitely relieved she would be to have Caroline out of town for a while, to have Alec once more to herself.

But Alec was frowning. "No, I don't mean stock. I'm talking about a New York production."

Gina's gray eyes flew open incredulously. "But Alec," she protested softly, "do you think that's advisable? I thought—"

"I know," said Alec, "you thought that no one could possibly appear on Broadway until they'd had at least two years in stock."

"Well," said Gina, "do you think it's wise for Caroline to attempt it without having any experience at all?"

"Do you think," asked Alec impatiently, "that I would suggest it, if I thought it wasn't?"

"No, of course not. All the same—"

"I know. It isn't done. Two years in stock. At least one season with a summer theatre. The old Broadway formula. But this time we're going to break the formula. Create a new one. And if I tell Bernstein to find a part for her, he'll damn well have to find one."

"There's no doubt about that." That half smile on Gina's mouth and in her eyes. That smile that was so hard to define.

She knew that the last four of Alec's plays had appeared under Bernstein management and that they had made the producer thousands of dollars. He could afford to risk a dozen unimportant parts in as many plays, rather than risk incurring Alec's displeasure.

So she said now, "You probably know best. . . . and it was presumptuous of me to speak as though you didn't."

"For God's sake, darling, don't be humble with me. I can't bear it. . . . and don't you know that you can always say anything you like to me?"

Gina's lips quivered again into that sweet, light laugh. "Can I, darling? That is a great comfort to me. But in the meantime, I have to catch a train to Pittsburgh."

Alec said, "Damn Pittsburgh. . . . and felt that old sense of loneliness descend upon him that he always felt when Gina was to be out of town for any length of time.

But he paid their dinner check and later, in the compartment which he insisted upon her having, he put his arms around her neck and kissed her.

It was an old and perfectly natural gesture. For years when either of them had left by train or boat or plane, they had kissed good-by.

But tonight Gina clung to him in her soft sweats and silver foxes, and to her great horror found herself crying.

Reaching blindly for his handkerchief, she said, "Don't pay any attention to me, Alec. I'm all tired out and coming down with a cold. I'd cry if a cat looked at me."

He wiped her eyes and said, scowling at her, "When you come back we must arrange a vacation for you. A month at least, without any work at all. . . . Bermuda, perhaps, or the South of France. . . ."

"It's funny to think," Gina's laugh was shaky and muffled in the handkerchief, "that we always meant to get to both those places together when we were rich and could afford it and that now we never will—but not because we can't afford it. . . ."

It was a silly speech and clumsily worded, and once it was out she would have given anything not to have said it.

But Alec seemed to find it neither clumsy nor silly. He merely said, "I don't see why you say that we never will. As a matter of fact, I don't see why I couldn't arrange to get away for a month a little later in the year, and there's no reason in the world why we shouldn't take a holiday together if we want to. . . . Work hard in Pittsburgh, darling, and perhaps we can manage it, not the South of France but Bermuda. . . ."

The train was about to pull out and he had to go. He kissed her again and hurried to the platform to wave to her. Her face, pressed against the compartment window, looked young and more beautiful and less tired than it had looked in months.

Or perhaps it was the hat she was wearing, a new and this time becoming one, or the silver fox furs that framed her lovely face so charmingly.

"Anyway," he walked off thinking, "I suppose in a certain quiet way I shall go on loving Gina to the end of my life. . . ."

But he knew now, beyond all doubts, that he would never do anything about it, and he was glad that her dinner engagement with Barry Bedard that afternoon a few weeks ago had prevented him from suggesting to her that perhaps he should.

He thought now that even if he had suggested it nothing, probably, would have come of it. She would doubtless have laughed that sweet, fluid laugh of hers and said, "Don't be an idiot, Alec. . . . we were finished with that part of our lives years ago."

a mere mess of expediency pottage, served in a Socialist boarding house with Gifford Pinchot at the head of the table doing the serving, while your table mates would range in hue from pale pinks to red reds.

The evils of this expediency philosophy are manifesting themselves not only here in America and in Pennsylvania tonight, but cast your eyes around the World, where other weaker-kneed individuals and even smaller nations are spinelessly electing to fall in line behind the War Lords—enemies of all humanity—simply because they too think "they can win!"

Tonight I would sound a warning to my listeners here in this Commonwealth—Stop, Look and Listen before you leap into anybody's expediency line.

If I am any judge of sentiment, the hour has struck in this State when our people are demanding something more in the shape of a candidate to carry their flag in the November election than merely a man who might win.

So if by any stretch of the imagination, Mr. Harris' sole announced reason for supporting my opponent were valid, isn't it a fact that you'd be in identical the same position as the dog that caught a freight train after he'd chased it every morning for a year. He didn't know what to do with it after he caught it, and neither would you with Pinchot.

At this point I want to drive down another warning peg. My opponent in this primary election is trying to build himself up a letter-writing case of "mud-slinging, disturbance of party harmony," etc.

Very clever ruse of the old gentleman, but it won't work; oh, no, my friends, that dog won't hunt; for the trail is too cold, too old, and too well worn.

There is no man in this state who more earnestly wants party harmony than Arthur James, but if it turns out that every time either myself or anyone else in Pennsylvania pulls my opponent's public record—remember, a record which he himself made by his own acts and deeds—out of the moth balls for an airing in order that the voters may properly classify the man in their minds before they ballot, we are to be charged with "harmony disturbance"—then I say if that be political treason, make the most of it!

Whoever would associate Gifford Pinchot with "harmony," anyway?

Don't be misled by the harmony talk. Coming from him, I'm reminded of the scriptures: "The voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hands are the hands of Esau."

We want harmony, all right, but there are some other things we want. I have spoken of the distressed condition of our State. Let me amplify that a bit.

For eight years the country has been in a depression, both economic and spiritual. Despite the expenditure of many billions of dollars and the enactment of unnumbered laws, today conditions are worse than ever.

Pennsylvania could not hope to escape the financial stress of this period, but we were entitled to hope for the aid and co-operation of our State government. What have three years of Democratic mis-rule done for this State.

Today, hear me, of all the unemployed in the United States, one in every ten lives in Pennsylvania.

This state has more than one million unemployed.

Those are startling figures. They mean that the percentage of unemployment in Pennsylvania is 25 per cent worse than in the United States as a whole.

And what is more terrifying, our industries are moving from our State; adding to the list of unemployed, and reducing the number of those on whom the burden of their support falls.

These, let me say at once, are not the problems which concern only the industrialist, the factory owner, the employer of labor.

On the contrary, they lie close to every fireside in the State. They concern your pay envelope, your children, the shopping list which your wife will prepare for this week-end's meals.

What solution has the State offered to this urgent problem?

Two: Laws and taxes.

And plenty of both!

The last session of the Legislature outdid itself on laws. They passed so many that it took eight months to print the books. There were two of these books, each of them with fifteen hundred pages, and each page filled with fine print.

These laws delve into every phase of life, they threaten to ensnare every phase of business.

Red tape is the order of the day.

The bulk of these laws are punitive, which means that they are intended to make trouble for someone, and they do! A large portion are frankly political, which means that they were passed to sound good, not to work.

These acts strike at the very fundamentals of Constitutional Government and at the heart of industry.

In their haste to pass laws, the legislature made mistakes which perhaps some of you will feel are rather fortunate.

Eleven of the laws already have been declared unconstitutional, four in part unconstitutional, twelve are now being attacked before the courts, and it is expected that others will be attacked in the near future.

The other answer to the State's problems is taxes.

The supreme achievement of the present Democratic administration was that it succeeded in taxing everything that the previous administration had missed.

Taxes, taxes, forever and ever it's taxes!

Visible taxes and invisible taxes. Taxes on everything, until today there is hardly a citizen in the State who does not pay a tax twenty times a day.

This taxation has struck with deadly effect on our manufacturing industries, which today are paying higher taxes than in any other State in the Union.

As illustrating this fact, a certain corporation in the City of Philadelphia in the year of 1934 paid a State tax of $922.95. This increased yearly, until in 1937 this company's tax reached the astounding figure of $38,700, an increase of forty-two times.

Had this company been located in either Delaware or New Jersey, it would not have been liable for any taxes.

Is it any wonder that industry is leaving our State, abandoning its factories, with distress and unemployment in its wake?

Perhaps this will seem remote to you, and you feel that the business which you are working for is not to be affected by any such considerations.

Let me point out to you that the mistakes of the Democratic regime at Harrisburg are not being overlooked by our neighboring states, which have a full estimate of the value of our industries, and which are making an aggressive effort to cash in on those mistakes.

I have in my pocket at this very moment a letter from a civic organization in the State of Delaware, written to a business in my home town of Plymouth—a business so small that you might wonder how people in Delaware ever heard of it. It makes mine drills, which is a highly specialized business, and it employs perhaps fifty people at most.

This very business-like letter lists the amounts of Pennsylvania taxes which this Plymouth company has to pay, and points out that the State of Delaware would charge it not a penny in such taxes.

Is it any wonder that our factories are on the march?

No problem in Pennsylvania shouts louder for solution, and nothing would do more to help the status of both workmen and the unemployed, than for the State government to inspire the confidence of business. Once the idle money in our State starts to work men will start to work.

Those of us who see the State of Pennsylvania as she is today, with her factories moving away and much of her business prostrate, economically far behind the rest of the country, know how vital it is that all of the facts—the reasons for this condition—be placed squarely before the people of this Commonwealth who by their ballot will sit in judgment on the future of Pennsylvania next May 17.

The propaganda mills have been working overtime—one industry which is still flourishing in Pennsylvania—trying to convince Republican voters that my opponent can win back to the Republican ranks enough Democratic support to carry the general election in November.

The Democrats, for reasons of their own, are encouraging that opinion. Wake up, fellow Pennsylvanians. Let us tonight resolve to band ourselves together and march in solid phalanx out of these swamps of expediency into which we have been lured by all manner of false promises and false statements.

More is at stake in these coming elections than the personal ambitions of any man. More even than the future of the Republican Party, deeply though that is concerned in the outcome of this battle.

This is a fight to rescue our State herself, to put Pennsylvania back on her feet.

To win this fight—and we must win this fight—we need energy and a record for victory that spell success.

I believe that I have the record and the energy to lead a victorious army of Republicans in November. With your help, I shall be the Republican nominee.

ness with these divisions is transacted through small openings.

The blueprint section is kept locked at all times. A worker asking for a drawing is given only that blueprint which is necessary to his work.

"In this way," said the company spokesman who was also acting as guide, "The worker does not know anything about the other parts of the machine he is working on."

And as far as the eye can see, are workers huddled over machines and benches, benches loaded with airplane parts.

"Undoubtedly you're interested in the government work," said my guide laughingly, as I looked around.

"Well, there are restricted and non-restricted units," he explained. "These divisions here are all non-restricted. I can't take you into the restricted section. No one, not even the highest ranking official of a foreign nation, can enter without authorization. In fact, I can't get in myself without a special pass."

It was learned that only men of unimpeachable background and highly skilled in their trade are allowed to work on government plans. Government inspectors populate that section, giving advice, looking over the work, recommending changes, and submitting the product to intensive tests.

So it was only a cursory visit of the gigantic plant that was in order.

Returning to the official's office in the administration building this correspondent was reminded about his pass, clipped to his coat.

"Don't forget to leave me that pass," said the official. "You know, I'm held responsible for its return."

Mussolini Warns Democracies Not To Interfere

While Hitler struck Austria, Mussolini stood by silently, perhaps regretfully, but helpfully.

Now, while Mussolini strikes Spain, Hitler stands by and the mere existence of his superior air fleet, capable of dealing incalculable death to London, makes it extremely unlikely that England will do anything effective to help France avoid that complete military encirclement which a Franco victory means.

After Spain comes Hitler's turn again, and this time competent observers believe Hungary is next in line to receive the benefits of the Nazi hegemony.

This is because Hungary, despite tough Admiral Horthy, has no friends and no means to resist. Her inclusion in some sort of federation of the Nazi Reich would be much more valuable than Austria because of Hungary's agriculture.

Her grain could almost make up that twenty per cent which Germany still lacks of food to be self-supporting.

Hungary, too, is the gateway to Rumania's oil.

Thus France and England today are watching two men reverse the decision of 1918. The Versailles Treaty has been liquidated and Hitler is proving what he has always told his people—that, in truth, "Germany won the war."

worthwhile cure and safeguard. Young people must have games, and clubs to occupy their leisure time, but under the new compulsory education law, it is going to be a difficult problem that must be met. Work does not harm anyone and under the new law in our State, we are preventing boys from working and making loafers out of them.

Judge Boyer declared that one of the most important factors in juvenile delinquency about which we can do the least is heredity. Most of the delinquents are of a low mental grade, he said, and juvenile delinquents are mostly below the average in intelligence.

"I hope the time will soon be here, and I believe it is not far off, when our schools will have courses in eugenics when youth will be greatly aided in selecting a mate," Judge Boyer continued. "This type course would greatly decrease the tendency of selecting a mate on emotion called love."

The question of sterilization was briefly discussed by Judge Boyer, who declared that it was nothing more than justice to the unborn thousands to carry out that method of decreasing juvenile delinquency.

As to the question of parents, Judge Boyer said that the courts find that in most every instance either the mother or the father are like the delinquent child, or the child is like the parent.

"The factor of the home is very important," Judge Boyer said. "Most of the children in the juvenile delinquent class come from poor homes. I do not mean poor financially, but from homes with a poor moral atmosphere. It is not necessary to have culture but it is absolutely necessary to have a good moral atmosphere."

"The greatest tragedy in the American home today is the 'broken home,' where divorce has occurred or perhaps where parents should be divorced or separated."

"The irreligious also plays a big part in juvenile delinquency. In almost every single case before the Court, the boy or girl or the parents do not go to church or attend Sunday School. Does that condition mean anything?"

"Environment of the community is another important factor. The juvenile delinquents usually come from the poorest sections of the town or city. We do not have this condition to so great an extent in Bucks county as they do in the cities. Statistics show that 80 percent of the inmates of the penitentiaries are from the slums of the big cities."

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

If form and finesse mean anything in fighting, it looks like Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, has a Hollywood contender in Herman Brix, who as "Chopper" Donovan in "Flying Fists," the feature now showing at the Bristol Theatre, shows both fight and movie fans a thing or two about heavyweight boxing. Brix, a United States Olympic champion, is one of the most outstanding power-men that the screen has to offer, and he displays a goodly knowledge of fistcrafts in this fast and furious film. In fact, the "Chopper" has a tougher time getting an okay from his girl than he has kayoing his fight opponents.

"Flying Fists" is aces in entertainment, and it tells a punchy story of the ring and romance. You'll have a grand time at this film, for it will keep you keyed up and thrilled every minute. It builds you up, and it doesn't let you down! It has new twists and new angles that are brand new to prize-fight stories. "Chopper," the champion is drafted into fight service by Sing Cassidy and his manager, Spider, after "Chopper" has given Sing, an ex-heavyweight champ, the fight of his life. Of course, at the crucial point in his fight career, "Chopper" meets lovely Kay Conrad, who being the daughter of a prize-fighter, who was permanently injured in the ring, hates fighters. This complicates matters for "Chopper" but things work out all right.

GRAND

With George Brent and Olivia de Havilland as its stars, "Gold Is Where You Find It," a thrilling melodrama of California in the 1870's, has its local premiere today at the Grand Theatre.

It is a Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan production in Technicolor and according to reports of previewers is one of the really best pictures of the season. "Gold Is Where You Find It" deals with a phase of gold-seeking that has hitherto been untouched by the movies—the hydraulic mining whereby tremendously powerful streams of water ripped away hillsides, from the debris of which the miners sifted their metal.

But this debris overflowed upon the lands of the wheatgrowers and orchardists, and warfare resulted—a conflict that was prolonged and deadly. The fight extended over a number of years, nearly split the State of California in two, and was not settled until a court decision declared in favor of the agriculturists and made the hydraulic interests quit.

Supporting Brent and Miss de Havilland are Claude Rains, Margaret Lindsay, John Littel, Marcia Ralston, Barton MacLane, Tim Holt (young son of the famous Jack), Sidney Toler, Henry O'Neill, Willie Best, Robert McWade, Harry Davenport, a score of others, plus thousands of extras.

To keep linen from turning yellow, wrap it in a fast color blue paper.

One pint of milk gives about the same amount of calcium as a combination of five oranges, five apples, five servings of canned peas and one head of cabbage.

TIMELY RECIPES You Will Want to Try!

Toasted Cheese

One-half pound American cheese; one teaspoon salt; one-half teaspoon mustard; paprika; one egg; one-half to one cup milk.

Cut the cheese into small pieces. Place in a greased pan, sprinkle with mixed seasonings. Beat the egg in slightly and add one-half cup milk. Add enough more milk to cover. Put pan in another pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes, until cheese is brown.

Cheese Fondue

One-fourth to one-half pound cheese; three eggs; one-half teaspoon salt; one tablespoon butter; one cup scalded milk; one cup soft bread crumbs. (Usual quantity of cheese is one-fourth pound, but some prefer stronger cheese flavor.)

Let cheese stand at room temperature before using so that it may be forced easily through a sieve or ricer. Scald milk and remove from fire. Add butter and salt. Pour slowly over well-beaten egg yolks. Add soft bread crumbs and cheese. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into mixture. Bake in buttered pan in slow oven 250 to 350 degrees F. for 20 minutes. Serves six.

Cottage Cheese Balls

One-half cup thick white sauce, made from one-half cup milk, two tablespoons flour; one tablespoon shortening, salt and pepper.

Two cups cottage cheese; one beaten egg; two cups mashed potatoes; bread crumbs.

Prepare white sauce and gradually beat cottage cheese into it. Add mashed potatoes, season, make into soft balls, roll in bread crumbs, then in beaten egg, then in crumbs again. Fry in deep shortening until golden brown. Delicious served with tomato sauce.

Scalloped Bananas

Two cups fine bread crumbs; three tablespoons melted butter; two medium-sized all-yellow bananas; one tablespoon lemon juice; sprinkling of salt and nutmeg; two tablespoons butter, cut in small pieces.

Brown bread crumbs in melted butter. Mix thinly-sliced bananas with cream. Add any desired flavoring.

lemon juice, and add salt, nutmeg and sugar. Place a layer of crumbs in buttered baking pan. Cover with layer of bananas and top with crumbs. Dot with one-half of the butter. Make a second layer of bananas, crumbs and butter. Bake in a moderate oven 375 degrees F. 15 to 20 minutes, or until bananas are done. This yields four servings and is doubly good served with this hot orange sauce.

Orange Sauce

One-half cup sugar; one tablespoon cornstarch; three-fourths cup boiling water; two tablespoons butter; one-fourth cup orange juice; one teaspoon grated orange rind; one teaspoon lemon juice; few grains cinnamon; few grains salt.

Mix sugar and cornstarch. Add water gradually, stirring constantly. Boil five minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in butter, orange juice, orange rind, lemon juice, cinnamon and salt.

Quick Jumbles

Beat one-half pound of sugar and one-half pound of shortening to a cream. Add any desired flavoring.

U. S. Veterans' Hospital
Finds Successful Treatment

Supply of Colloidal Sulphur Rushed Here as Sufferers See New Hope in Scientific Discovery

New hope for sufferers from rheumatism and arthritis pain is seen today as a result of the successful tests reported by the U. S. Veterans' Hospital, New York, in over 200 cases by the use of colloidal sulphur.

This form of sulphur goes into the blood 1,000 times faster than ordinary sulphur and rushes to every joint and muscle where it acts like millions of tiny magnets in drawing out pains, swellings, stiffness.

Formerly requiring painful, extensive injections, this new colloidal sulphur treatment may at last be obtained in nice, easy-to-take tablets, called Q-LOID. This is a very effective medicine, but considering results experienced, the $5 it costs for a full 30 day supply is only 10¢ per day and they are fully guaranteed! Act at once, supply limited. LAST DAY TO TRAIN DOGS IN THE OPEN FIELDS

Today is the last day on which hunters can legally train their dogs in the open fields, according to Daniel Potter, Jr., Deputy State Game Protector. "Some have a wrong idea as to the last day on which they can take their dogs out into the fields and train them," states Mr. Potter. "Today is the last day."

According to Mr. Potter, those who are caught training their dogs in the open fields after today will be prosecuted under the State Game Laws, and it found guilty will be subject to a fine of $10 and costs for each offense.

Mr. Potter says that the State has heavily stocked lower Bucks County and that stray dogs and others in the field are liable to kill off this game.

If stray dogs are caught they will be instantly killed, but if owners are known they will be prosecuted.

DUSEK PINNED TO MAT BY GINO GARIBALDI

TRENTON, N. J., Mar. 31.—Gino Garibaldi, leading Italian heavyweight, won the feature wrestling match at the Arena last night when he pinned Wally Dusek, youngest of the famous Omaha Riot Squad, in the first and third falls.

For brevity, last night's match surpassed any of those seen at the local Arena in some time. Garibaldi gained the first fall with a punishing leg hold after 16 minutes. Dusek was only too glad to acquiesce to Referee Matt Poljanek's "Have you had enough?" Wally was awarded the second fall in 14 seconds when he met Garibaldi's bull-like rush in his corner and flattened the latter before the gallery fans had gained their seats following the intermission.

Garibaldi resorted to the same hold that gained for him the first fall in pinning Dusek for the deciding count. Gino entwined Dusek's legs in such a manner that the beserk member of the famous wrestling family was unable to untangle himself after one minute and 20 seconds had transpired.

Al Bisignano returned to the local mat to gain a referee's decision over Jimmy Parker, former Black Secret, in the semi-windup after 30 minutes of spirited grappling. "Blay" weathered many of Parker's unethical holds with some neat grappling of his own. The fans were very much in accord with the referee's decision.

In his first appearance in Trenton after an extended absence, Chief Chewacki, maddest of the rough-and-tumble grapplers, won a none-too-popular verdict over George Kondylas, classy Greek matman, after 16 minutes.

Andy Rascher, popular collegian, repeated his winning performance in Trenton when he took the first match in 17 minutes over Art LeGrand, stablemate of Yvon Robert.

BRISTOL SAXONS TO OPEN BALL SEASON

The Bristol Saxons, who are very eager to open the baseball season, will have a busy week ahead of them. The team has scheduled three games to be played in the period of four days, and since it may seem a little too strenuous for a team at this time of the season to play three games in the period of four days, the Saxons will carry on for the team in very good condition.

Tomorrow the Saxons will travel to Edgely to play the team of that place. The Bristol team will be out to seek revenge for the defeat it suffered at the hands of the Edgely club last year by the score of 7-6 in extra innings. In an attempt to win this game, which will be last practice game for the Bristol team, Manager Norman Hetherington will send Sam Fiorelli to the mound with either C. Orino or D. Glazier behind the plate. Game will start at 3 p. m. sharp.

Saturday the team will again travel to Edgely to play the Edgely school team. This will be the first game of the season for the Bristol team and to start on the right foot, Manager Norman Hetherington will send "Reds"

Rotondo to the mound. Game starts 10 a. m. sharp.

Sunday the team will play the toughest game of all when they meet the strong Fifth Ward Sporting Club of Bristol. These two teams have been after each other for some time and have finally arranged a game to be played on Leedom's field. In order to win this game, which will be close and exciting from start to finish, Manager Hetherington will send his ace south-paw to the mound. He is none other than Joe Lapolla, star of last year's American Legion team. For the Fifth Ward team, Leo Riley, also a member of the American Legion team, will step out to the mound and will be received by either "Danny" DiMidio or "Pat" Capone. Both teams will present strong line-ups for this game, which starts at 2:30 sharp.

Sunday, April 10th, the Saxons will meet the strong Newportville team on Leedom's Field at 2:30 p. m.

These games will give the fans of this section a chance to be the first to see these clubs in action.

SAFETY PLAN FAILS

SACRAMENTO, Cal. (INS)—William Coombs of San Francisco wanted to protect his horse from "greenhorn" hunters, so he tied him in a gully near Healdsburg. Coombs took to the woods to hunt deer, leaving "ol' Dobbin" safe he thought. But the "horse" didn't live out the day. Coombs himself, shot and killed the animal, mistaking him for a deer!

TIMELY RECIPES YOU WILL WANT TO TRY

Baked Fish

Many children refuse fish because it is not prepared in appetizing form, or because there is no variety in fish dishes.

Older children and adults will enjoy stuffed and baked fish. Small fish like porgies or perch are delicious, when prepared with this simple stuffing.

One grated raw carrot, a little grated onion juice, salt, one tablespoon chopped parsley, shake of pepper, and one-half cup cooked (left-over) cereal. If cereal is not available, use an equal quantity of soft bread crumbs. Mix well and stuff the little fish. Place in buttered baking dish, putting one-half cup of water in the bottom of dish. Place two tablespoons butter on fish, and a shake of bread or cracker crumbs. Bake very slowly in a moderate oven until the fish is done.

Cream Cheese Turnovers

Two and one-half cups flour; one-half cup shortening; ice water; one-half teaspoon salt; one-half cup of cream cheese; tart jelly.

Put the flour and salt in a chopping bowl. Measure in the cheese and shortening. Chop until well-blended. Heap up the mixture. Make a hole in the center and pour in enough ice water to make a firm dough (about three-fourths cup water.) Turn out on a lightly floured board and roll to one-eighth inch thickness.

Cut into rounds about three inches square. Place small teaspoon tart jelly on each. Fold over, press edges together and bake in a hot oven 375 degrees F. until brown.
